SOCIAL ILLITERACY OF CORPORATE INDIA Technocratic, market-oriented education with a narrow focus results in people having little understanding of any kind of broad sociocultural issue. What else can explain the completely insensitive hashtag "#kachrabhikhelega" (waste/trash will also play)? Does the Zomato team behind this spot believe that this is inclusivity?

The food delivery service Zomato released its latest promotional advertisement "Kachra can change the game" (Kachra in Hindi means waste/rubbish/trash). It is an attempt to showcase the work done by the company to mitigate climate change by recycling rubbish. The ad, however, is far more problematic than the usual ones made by corporations trying to greenwash their products. So much so that Zomato appears to have taken it down from social media platforms after a backlash.

The ad uses the character, Kachra, and references the hugely popular and iconic Bollywood film, Lagaan (2001). The film, set in 1893, during the British Raj, follows the inhabitants of a village in central India, who, burdened by high taxes and several years of drought, are challenged to play a cricket match by an arrogant British Indian Army officer as a wager to avoid paying the taxes they owe. The villagers face the arduous task of learning a game that is alien to them. The film was a resounding success when it was released. It played on the nationalistic sentiments of overcoming adversity. Underdog Indians won against impossible odds. Kachra in the film is depicted as having a disability, his right wrist and arm are withered from polio and he has an odd gait. He is also an "untouchable", a Dalit.

WOMAN LEFT WITH ONLY RS 5 IN HER BANK ACCOUNT AFTER 13-YEAR-OLD DAUGHTER SPENDS RS 52 LAKH ON MOBILE GAMES

Gaming addiction is real and when it sometimes goes out of hand, it can get dangerous. A 13-year-old girl in China has completely drained her family's savings within four months by spending 449,500 yuan (approximately Rs 52,19,809) on online gaming. Most games have paid tools that attract gamers to spend more money in order to access powerful tools that can help them play the game even better.

As per South China Morning post, the incident came to light when the girl's teacher noticed her excessive phone usage during The incident occurred on Saturday night after the male passenger (31), school and suspected she might be addicted to pay-to-play games. According to the FIR, the assistant manager of the hotel said the guest and his family booked two single occupancy rooms assuring the staff payment will be made on May 31 New Delhi: A man has been arrested for allegedly refusing to pay a bill of ₹ 3.65 lakh for staying with his family at a fivestar hotel in Lutyens' Delhi, police said on Thursday. According to the FIR, the assistant manager of the hotel said the guest and his family booked two single occupancy rooms assuring the staff that the payment will be made on May 31.

They checked into the hotel on May 28

but the guest did not make the payment on the promised date, police said citing the First Information Report (FIR).

The guest allegedly breached the hotel's credit policy by showing fraudulent UTR (Unique Transaction Reference) numbers claiming that he had already paid ₹ 6,50,000 through bank transfer.

But upon checking, no such transaction was found to be made by him and when he was asked about it, he assured that the payment will be made on June 3. During this period, he enjoyed all the services including meals and bar -- and again on the assured date, he failed to make the payment, the FIR stated.

When confronted, he threatened the hotel staff that he would call the police and frame false allegations against them.

Dr Padmini Desai, member of the Advanced Locality Management (ALM), who resides near the MHADA office, said, "The MHADA area is chock-a-block with barely one lane for vehicles to pass from both sides. If there are any construction vehicles, there will be jams. There are tables placed on footpaths by hawkers and stalls at the corner of the road where auto and cab drivers park their vehicles while having food. This leads to further iams.

Dr Desai added that she has operated on a few people from her area, who met with an accident due to rash driving by auto drivers. "An auto ran over someone's foot and he had to be operated upon
